PREFACE.

My desire to preserve the inscriptions on the stones, monuments and tombs, in Little Britain Burying Ground, where some of my kindred and friends are buried, has induced me to procure, and to publish in permanent form, so much of these inscriptions as relate to names, dates and ages.

Care has been taken to have this record correct and complete, but, in some cases, letters and figures are so nearly illegible, from the effects of time, the elements, or other causes, that errors may have been made; and in other cases, graves are, in places, so promiscuously located that some may have been accidentally overlooked.

Several blank pages, properly lettered, have been added as an appendix, for additions, and for the correction of any errors that may be found; the rule being regarded as a good one that the discoverer of an error is competent to make the necessary correction.

GEORGE HAMILTON MORRISON.
